PREFACE

Above all, we are grateful to Allah SWT for His blessings this book can finally be accomplished.

This book contains curriculum and course description for the Department of Communication Science and the Study Program of International Relations, Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, Brawijaya University academic year 2014/2015. As starting the academic year 2010/2011 FISIP UB opens specific classes using the language of instruction in English for the Department of Communication Science and the Study Program of International Relations, it is necessary to provide information about curriculum and subject description for these two departments in English. This book is intended to provide guidance to policy makers, lecturers and students in setting and carrying out teaching and learning activities in order to achieve their goals efficiently. Finally, it is highly expected that this book will be beneficial to those who need a reference to perform academic activities.

This book is developed based on the implementation of Law on National Education System nr. 20 year 2003 and PP nr. 50 year 1990 regarding the system of higher education in Indonesia and the decree of Minister of National Education nr. 080/0/2002 regarding the status of UB. Any kinds of suggestions and criticism for the improvement of this book are a great expectation.

KOM1309 Indonesian and Asian Communication Perspectives

3(3-0) Credits

This course is expected to give students a thorough understanding of the emergence of non-western perspectives in the study of communication science. The emergence of non-western perspectives was initiated by Valbuena (1986), Dissanayake (1988), Jayaweera (1988), Chu (1988), Tehranian (1988 & 1996), and Murthy (2000) who stated the need for a review of Western communication studies with Asian cultures and traditions. To date there has been a debate over whether communication studies can be disaggregated based on geographical and cultural perspectives. While the Asian / non-western approach itself was born from problems in Asian society, especially in the field of development. Chu (1988) argues that the problems that arise in the study of communication between Western and Eastern is a cultural issue. The opinion is based on different perspectives between each culture on the environment. While in Asia it can not be said to be a homogeneous society, because many values affect it such as the values of Hindu, Buddhist, Confucian, Islamic, and Taoist beliefs. Whereas in the West the dominance of Christian values becomes the background of the birth of a theory in communication. In addition to providing an understanding of non-western perspectives, these lectures are built in the spirit of postcolonialism, in which the passion arouses the great narratives born of Western culture. Students are also expected to have analytical skills to provide examples in everyday life such as what a non-western perspective in the study of communication science.
